Swedes shows them that outside money cannot be had for paper assurances. The Bolsheviki are beginning to admit frankly that they must recognize trade and property rights because trade at home is aiready deep rooted enough to function whether the Communists like it or not.

Hesitation in Policy.

Hesitation characterizes the present Soviet policy, and this is a direct result of Lenine's paralysis. He alone could dominate factional differences. Rykoff, mo. but weak, who is attempting to fill Lenine's shoes, cannot operate the dictatorship alone. Consequently the lesser statesmen are constantly stepping on each other's toes. Litvinof's combinations shut George Trehtcherin combined to forestall another outbreak. the lesser statesmen are constantly step-ping on each other's toes. Litvinoff's combinations shut George Tchitcherin out of The Hague, and now Litvinoff, with the support of his clique, Radek and Sinoview, opposes Tchitcherin's re-turn to Moscow.

Tchitcherin told THE NEW YORK Herald correspondent that he is having several slight throat operations performed, which will delay him here. Litting, although in disgrace for having irritated everybody, including the Communists, at The Hagus, amphasized to the correspondent that he is still acting as Minister of Foreign Affairs and that the foreign policy in Moscow will not be eleradinal without him. This indicates the confusion in the Foreign Office.

There is a similar but less petty conflict between Leonid Krassine and the 100 per cent. Communists. Krassine did some business in England and Germany but the Soviet Trade Bureau tangled things up, obliging Krassine to carry on a fight in Moscow and begin again his work abroad.

things up, obliging Krassine to carry on a fight in Moscow and begin again his work abroad.

The Bolsheviki have discovered that the Germans will not take long chances in Russia and that the Rapollo treaty is remaining a dead letter, but they are still trying to overcome the hesitation of the Germans. The Germans, however, fear to act alone. It becomes increasingly clear each day that the Germans dread being excluded from subsequent economic and trade agreements which the Allies may impose on Russia. Also the Germans now frankly admit that they have not sufficient funds to begin large scale exploitation in Russia without American and British backing.

M. Krestinsky, the Soviet Ambassador in Berlin, is a little lawyer from Petrograd who seems burfed behind huge blue glasses and a bristly beard. His relations with the Germans are distant because they haven't any language in common. He too, is impatient to return home because he is ambitions to become a member of the Cabinet and hopes to get a constituency to support him among the Urst lailners.

ret 's constituency to support him among the Ural miners.

neds Seek French Backing.

The most interesting recent development is the effort on the part of the Boisheviki to get French backing. Radek last spring began tossing bouquets and flowers at Premier Poincare, and now Rakowsky is singing France's praises through Ukraine. That the Schneider metal interests and the large Farding groups were interested in opening the Ukraine for exploitation has given the Soviet Government hope. They have found a satisfactory channel of centact through the Ukrainan Nationalist Committee in Paris, which has influence in the Soviet Government without being Bolshevist.

Litvinoff, in attempting to explain mway his own unpopularity at home, used clever repartee rather than presented facts. He vigorously denied all conflist with Tehitcherin, emphasizing tha he (Litvinoff) was returning to help the Central Executive Committee to decide on the foreign policy. Litvinoff does not expect anything from Washington, but I'm would like to know what lind of a song would catch the ear of Washington.

"We have used all channels to re-

Washington.
"We have used all channels to reestablish relations with Washington," he said. "We would like to know what the Americans want, not in flowery cord declarations but in plain busi-

the Americans want, not in flowery *corpool declarations but in plain business language."

When asked whether the recognition of the Baltie provinces by the United States upset the Bolshevist leaders in Moscow, Litvinoff made a reply contradictory to the generally accepted Russian *cointon. "Why shouldn't Washington come out of the clouds and recognize the reality that the Baltie States have real functioning governments?" he said. "The Soviet Government gave recognition to the Baltie States over a year age and has no intention of trying to get them hack."

Litvinoff also modified his own statement made at The Hague, when he said concerning the attitude of the Soviet Government toward American reliet work that Russia would have grain enough for exporting, a statement which provoked unfavorable comment among those working to relieve the famine. "Roey optimists say that some regions in Russia may have a surplus," Litvinoff declared this time, "but we need American relief both for adult and child famine relief in many provinces."
